

Digital Libraries

At the Entrance

- The touch screen/PDA starts the service of sending some hints to the user how to use this service effectively;
- The user write in the search engine the words or numbers he is searching for;

On the Screen

The screen shows the user the ISBN, the whole information about the book, the abstract of the book, and some recommendations written about this book;

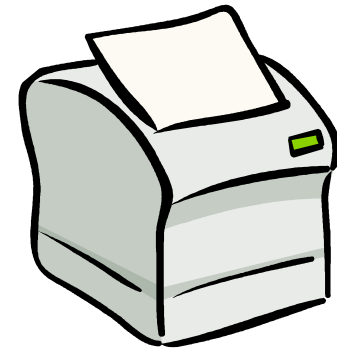

The screen after that, shows the user where is the book and how to reach it in fastest way, that is of course if it is available, by drawing a map from the position the user in to the position of the specific book he needs;

Using the Printer

The printer which is connected to the screen prints the map and the information needed about the book;

Searching for the book

The user goes to the specific place and notices the flashing LED near to one of some books, and knows that his book is in between them.
